From playing YouTube videos during class to spark off discussion to lending out books from their own private collection, these teachers will go to any length to get their students interested in lessons.

For their enthusiasm and creativity in making the subject come alive, eight teachers were given the Inspiring Teacher of English Award at an award ceremony on Tuesday evening.

The award, jointly presented by the Speak Good English Movement and The Straits Times, recognises teachers for their innovative methods while teaching the English language, literature and general paper.

The eight teachers are: Ms Pamela Kiew, Mr Edwin Tan, Ms Gladys Ng, Mr Julian Victor, Ms Sazaina Koh, Mrs Lee Poh Lin, Ms Shirley Teo and Ms Anna Mathew.

Minister of State for Education and Defence Lawrence Wong was the guest of honour at the event. He said that besides English language teachers, all teachers who use English as the medium of instruction should also serve as role models of good English.
